Pertinent Paragraphs

Have we got a Photographer in Lemon Grove? We were unable to answer this question last Saturday. We looked through our advertising columns, but could not find any reference.

Does it pay to advertise? The Review is mailed to our steadily growing list of subscribers twice a week and on Thursdays we are distributing 1400 copies of a shopper with all the ads at no extra charge.

Who will decide the issue? Last week we reported that Mr. A. P. Schnell of American Frozen Food Lockers had erected the biggest neon sign in Lemon Grove. Now, the new neon sign of Mr. Geo. Casteel is flashing on and off at the corner of Imperial and Broadway. Maybe the question should be: "Who is next?"

Dr. Lloyd S. Adams, Candidate For Grossmont High School, Speaks To Business Men

Dr. Lloyd S. Adams, candidate for Grossmont Union High School Board of Trustees spoke at the breakfast meeting of the Lemon Grove Business Men's Club on Tuesday.

Dr. Adams discussed the building of the new High School, so badly needed in Homeland township. He outlined his reasons for coming forward at this time, by showing the necessity of getting representation for those living on this side of the hill.

He showed the difficulties of providing school accommodation in this district by referring to the information given last week by Mr. Byron L. Netzley, District Superintendent of Lemon Grove School District.

Dr. Adams stated that, even emergency financing would be unable to provide school accommodation if steps were not taken immediately to provide for the larger enrollment in Lemon Grove during the next few years.

The Business Men accepted the offer of Mr. van Gilse of the lobby of the Theatre for future meetings, and the next breakfast meeting of the Club will be at the Sugar Plum Cafe next

Chamber Of Commerce Notes

Chris Ferguson, Chairman of the Community Center Committee, has received the blue prints for the new Lemon Grove Community Center from the County Department of Public Works. He has also been advised that the County will extend the water and power lines to the site of the new building. The rainy weather has delayed any activity during the past few days but work will proceed as soon as the ground is conditioned.

Ted Haaf, A.P. Schnell and Chris Ferguson attended the meeting of the County Federation held at Oceanside on Tuesday night. Mr. Vincenz, director of the County Department of Public Works was the principle speaker. They represented the Lemon Grove Chamber of Commerce.

The membership Committee under the leadership of Walter Williamson met last Friday night and laid some elaborate plan for the forth-coming Membership Campaign of the Chamber of Commerce. Announcement of the dates and the top personnel will be made in the next few days. Mr. Williamson says that Lemon Grove needs a strong Chamber of Commerce and that it can be strong only if everyone engaged in business in the community becomes an active participating member. He also calls on all citizens to join under the classification of non-business and non-professional. They too can do much thru the Chamber of Commerce to make this community second to none in the State.

20 ENSEMBLES AND A SARONG FOR MISS LAMOUR

That sarong she made famous still is haunting Dorothy Lamour.

Currently, Sunday, Monday, starred, with Don Ameche at the Grove Theatre in "Slightly French," gay new Columbia comedy with music of a Brooklyn-born Irish girl who borrows a French accent and takes over Hollywood, Dorothy has some 20 changes of costume, including gowns, suits, evening dresses, bathing suits, shirtwaists, robes; pyjamas and the newest in coats and hats, all designed by Columbia stylist Jean Louis. She also has a sarong, spangled with diamonds and gold sequins, 40,000 of them.

Miss Lamour, whose repudiation of the sarong as a costume has been both loud and determined, elected to wear the Jean Louis creation for two reasons: (1) on her it looked good, and (2) it wasn't really a sarong. In checking on the matter, Jean Louis discovered that Miss Lamour never had worn a true sarong in all of her pictures. A Malayan garment, the sarong is sewed top and bottom and looks like nothing in particular. What Miss Lamour has been wearing all these years has been a Tahitian parou, in case you didn't notice! Second feature is "The Plunderers" in color, Starring Rod Cameron and Ilona Massey.

Membership Campaign Stressed

A board of directors meeting of the Lemon Grove Business Women's League was held last week.

The duties of the different officers were outlined and it was decided to start an active membership campaign.

THIS AND THAT

by Dr. Frank Weege, D. C.

We shall first consider the various cooking processes and the advantages and disadvantages of each from the health standpoint. The most universal method of cooking is boiling, which consists of cooking in a bath of water at a temperature of about 212 degrees Fahrenheit. This method has serious disadvantages unless the purpose is to make soup or stew, in which case the water in which the food is cooked is consumed. Then the purpose is to get the flavors and soluble elements from the food into the water, and this is best done by long slow cooking below the boiling point.

When this is not what is wanted, boiling is a very poor method of cooking, for solution of material in the cooking water always occurs. In the case of fruits, fortunately, the juice or cooking water is always consumed, but in vegetable cookery it is mostly drained away, and even if served it is very likely not to be consumed.

Vegetables are valuable in the diet chiefly because of their high content of alkaline minerals. These minerals are soluble and when they are lost in the cooking water much of the value of the vegetables as food is also lost. The remaining material tastes washed out and flat and is made palatable only by the adding of much salt and other seasoning which is usually useless and sometimes harmful.

The steaming of vegetables, as against boiling, is a decided improvement. This is a method of cooking in steam generated by boiling water, and vegetables so cooked do not lose nearly so much of the valuable solubles as when boiled. However, they lose some, as the steam condenses on them and trickles off as hot water. Roughly, this loss is about half that of ordinary boiling.

These facts have led, in recent years, to the invention of very clever utensils known as waterless cookers. The waterless cooker is a vessel built to be set on top of the stove, but so constructed that the sides and top heat, as well as the bottom. With a little skill in handling the flame, vegetables can be cooked in such devices in a manner that heats them through without immersing them in water or subjecting them to the too drying heat of an oven.

Waterless cooking is really baking at low temperatures in an atmosphere just moist enough to prevent the food drying out, but with no steam condensing on it and running off. The foods cook in their own juices without either water or minerals running being added or lost. Thus they retain not only their full nutrient but also their flavor. Vegetables cleverly cooked in such devices have astonishingly delightful flavors and require little or no added seasoning. It is a style of cooking that is to be highly commended.

Although it requires more fuel, somewhat similar results can be obtained by cooking food in casserole, that is, in a covered dish in an oven. In this case also nothing is allowed to escape from the food and all mineral values may be retained. In the covered dish, as in the waterless cooker, we have a baking process at comparatively low temperature in a moist atmosphere.

Ordinary baking is applicable to foods that are of such nature that they do not dry out too much. While the temperature of the air of the baking oven ranges far above the boiling point, the temperature of food that retains its moisture does not exceed the boiling point of water, and cannot unless it is subjected to pressure.

Therefore, the middle of a baked potato or a loaf of bread is no hotter than food that is being boiled. Only the crust of bread that browns or darkens in color reaches a higher temperature. It was formerly thought that this made it more healthful, but modern feeding experiments have proved that this is not true and that rats, for instance, will not live and thrive as well on the crusts of bread as upon the interior of the loaf.

The food that is undoubtedly best when baked is the common potato. It should not be burned on the exterior and the skins should be eaten. Very few other vegetables can be handled in this fashion. As in the case of sweet potatoes, much of the food value of potatoes so cooked is often lost owing to the discarding of the skins. When it is not desired to eat the skin such foods can be boiled for a short time in water, when the thin outer skin may be removed and the cooking finished in the oven at temperatures that will not burn the outside.

A method of cooking which has many advantages and is quite adaptable to various foods is that of enclosing the food in tough parchment paper. This idea was first exploited under the term "Paper-bag Cookery." However, the difficulty of getting any form of glue that would hold a bag together in boiling water makes the use of flat sheets of parchment paper preferable. Such sheets have many uses about the kitchen, as for wrapping of foods in the refrigerator, to prepare salad on, or to line cake pans. The best grades may be used to line roasting pans in baking meats and are tough enough to retain the juices and gravy and keep the pan itself clean.

The parchment paper made for this purpose is not only impervious to both water and grease, but is made tougher rather than weaker by being either oiled or wet, or both oiled and wet. A sheet of such paper when moist can be easily gathered around any mass of food and tied with a string, so that a completely enclosing bag without seams is formed.

NOW, IT'S MONEY BACK GUARANTEE FOR GROVE MOVIE

So sure is John A. van Gilse of the Grove Theatre, that his patrons will like his Friday and Saturday show that he established some sort of a motion picture precedent when he guarantees satisfaction or your money back on "The Return of October" in technicolor with Glenn Ford and "The Kansan" with Richard Dix.

Van Gilse states that every so often, usually at too infrequent intervals. There pops upon the screen a picture so distinguished by the novelty of its story, the vibrant performances of its stars and its sheer light-heartedness, that it has universal appeal. Columbia pictures "The Return of October" is that kind of a film. Richard Dix in the Kansan is magnificent and this show which is based upon a historical background is sure to please, and as van Gilse states, if you don't like it, see him on your way out and he will refund your entertainment money.

FIRE HAZARD ALARMING

Concern is being expressed by residents of unincorporated areas closely surrounding San Diego, regarding the lack of fire protection available to these heavily populated districts.

Lemon Grove is an example of a rapidly increased population still remaining in an unincorporated area, which was formerly protected by State Forestry equipment, but now deprived of this protection during the dry period.

Extreme care must be taken by all residents of these areas to eliminate fire hazards around their homes and business establishments.

Insurance at high rates does not protect against loss of valuables and personal effects, which can never be replaced.

BREAD MAKING

"Home-made bread is easy to make", says Delphine D. Wilson, Home Demonstration Agent, Agricultural Extension Service, University of California. This is the short-process method given by Mrs. Wilson for three one pound loaves of bread. The ingredients necessary are 3 cups of milk or whey, 3 tablespoons of sugar, two to three tablespoons of butter or other fat, one tablespoon of salt, three-fourths to three cakes of compressed yeast and two quarts of flour. (The larger amount of yeast shortens the rising time)

The utensils should be scalded and drained dry, all measurements should be level and the flour should be sifted once into a large pan. The flour should be at a lukewarm temperature.
Scald the milk or whey then measure the milk after scalding.
Add the sugar, fat and salt to the hot liquid. When the liquid has cooled, add the yeast. Add about half the flour, combine and heat. Continue to add flour until a soft dough is formed.
Turn the dough on a floured board and knead.

After kneading the dough place it in a bowl which is

CITRUS NON-TILLAGE BULLETIN

The non-cultivation method of management has been adopted by many citrus growers in California. About 50,000 acres are now under this system of no covercrop and no tillage.
In order to keep growers informed, the Agricultural Extension Service has published a new booklet called "Eliminating Tillage in Citrus Soil Management."

San Diego County citrus growers have shown some interest in this new practice, reports Joe Coony, Assistant Farm advisor. Among the effects observed so far are: (1) improvement in the physical condition of the soil; (2) better water penetration; (3) reduced erosion; and (4) easier operations in the orchard. Erosion is lessened because the soil absorbs the water more easily and the firm surface does not wash away as easily as loose, plowed soil.

The costs of weed control under this system vary. They are higher than tillage costs the first two years. Under sprinkler irrigation, costs have been reported as two and three times that of conventional tillage here in San Diego County, cautions Coony. In view of these high costs, the grower—before adopting the non-tillage system—should be reasonably sure that he can follow it through for a period of years.

tain a copy of "Eliminating Tillage in Citrus Soil Management" visor's Office, Room 404, U. S.

Customs Building, San Diego.

slightly warm and cover with a cloth. Place the bowl in a pan of water about 90 degrees F.
Let it stand until double in bulk.
When the dough has risen punch it down and then let rise a second time.

Turn the dough out onto a board free of flour and cut in three portions. Roll into a ball and cover with a cloth barely dampened with warm water.
Let the dough rest for 10 minutes. Then mold into loaves and put into greased bread pans.
Grease the entire surface of the loaf slightly and let rise in a warm place 82 degrees F. until double in height. Bake at 400 degrees F for 15 or 20 minutes then lower heat to 375 degrees F. Turn the bread during the first 10 minutes of baking. Bake for 45 minutes.

tural Extension Service Room

Diego, California.

LEMON GROVE REVIEW Thursday May 19, 1949

LADD AS WESTERN HERO

A new kind of Alan Ladd action is in store for fans when Paramount's spectacular Technicolor Western, "Whispering Smith," arrives next Tuesday Wed. and Thurs. at the Grove Theatre, Ladd, in the title role makes his debut as a full-fleged, rootin', tootin' Western hero, complete with six-guns, a fast-riding horse and plenty of hair-raising trouble.

"Whispering Smith," based on the novel by Frank H. Spearman, co-stars Ladd with Robert Preston, Brenda Marshall and Donald Crisp. It concerns the activities of a soft-spoken but tough railroad detective whose job it is to crack down on train wreckers and looters. Among the latter, Ladd is shocked to find his best friend. Complicating matters still further is the awkward fact that the friend's wife and Ladd are more in love with each other than they care to admit even to themselves.

The film, Ladd's first in Technicolor, is said to be full of high-powered action of the kind that is right up Alan's alley.

SPRINKLING OPERATION

No matter how well engineered and installed the irrigation system may be, the individual sprinkler operation must be checked. Rust particles and matter in the water often clog or otherwise interfere with proper sprinkler rotation and discharge. Assistant Farm advisor Joe Coony suggests that irrigators check the sprinklers at least twice during a set.
Trouble is more likely to occur in the early part of the season.

THINK OF THE HOT DAYS

Shade and ventilation are important in the poultry plant layout during hot weather. Robert H. Adolph, Assistant Farm Advisor of the University of California Agricultural Extension Service cautioned poultrymen today that the best time to make preparations about the poultry ranch for the hot weather is before those hot days come.

If the Poultry house has wooden walls, ventilation should be provided at the level of the hen and also under the roof to avoid accumulation of hot air. The use of a dropping board does not permit the maximum amount of ventilation for birds during hot weather.

Ventilation is not the full answer to keeping birds comfortable in hot weather, Adolph says.

The use of shade on the poultry farm should have more attention. Natural shade is better than artificial shade. Trees should be deciduous rather than evergreen because they will let the sun through in winter months when this is desirable.
Some producers put straw or tree branches on the top of the poultry house to protect it from the heat of the sun.
